To Whom it may concern

My view on human rights in Australia relates to young people and children. not enough is done to support young people struggling in their family circumstances. Violence and drug use in the family home affects the child's life dramaticly. In is a basic human right to have shelter and shelter needs to be safe. It is very hard to gain independence for centrelink purposes to move out of the family home, leaving youths desperate, ruthless and with nothing to loose. By having a Human rights Act is the first step to tackle a rising issue in the community.
