Submission Text:

I am gravely concerned about any debate concerning a so-called bill of rights for Australia.

Australia is already the freest and best country in the world where we feel safe and can express our conscience. Any attempt to now create some bill to define this will only result in a compromise between the vested interests of many parties and groups and this can only produce something unworkable as a result.

We are freer than anywhere. We are safer than anywhere. We are more protected than anywhere. Those who are blest to live in this Commonwealth need and admire and value and extol what we already have.
