

National Human Rights Consultation Submission

Submission Text:

"Human rights are important to Australia's democracy". However they are not more important than democracy. Australians have repeatedly demonstrated through democratic process that we don't want our constitution changed. To supplant the constitutional rights of all Australians by replacing those rights with a charter enforced by unelected judges is both devious and undemocratic.

To fix the injustices in this country we just need to learn to respect and be kind to each other. However you cannot legislate against a bad attitude%21
