Submission Text:

Thank you for the opportunity to submit my view.

I strongly oppose to the need for the introduction of a bill of rights. Australia already has a very well developed and comprehensive human right protection system. We have one of the best human rights system in the world which has afforded its citizens the best protection of their individual rights. The existing judicial system provides excellent channels for people who feel their rights are abused or threatened to seek redress. There is no need for any new framework of a bill of rights. Any change should be through the parliament who represents the majority view of Australians. I do not wish this matter to be in the hand of the judiciary who is not elected nor accountable to the people for their action.

Majority of us Australians do not see any need to introduce this new bill. I strongly oppose to its introduction.

Yours sincerely,

Song Huat Tan
